

Cowboys and White Shirts

A cowboy likes to wear a white shirt
When he goes out to rope and ride.
He buttons it clear up to the top
Like he's lookin' for a bride.

It makes him feel business-like and smart
When he's on the desert mastering his cowboy art.

The shirt is crisp and clean at the start of the day.
For a time the dust and grime is kept at bay.

Soon sweat, blood, and dirt can be seen,
And that white shirt isn't so clean.

At the end of the day, when the work is through,
My cowboy hands me that brownish white shirt and says,
"Can you make it look like new?"

I am the cowboy's bride, so I smile and say,
"I will for you."
